BE PART OF SOMETHING MORE

Greenford, once a quiet rural village on the outskirts of London, today is a small town centre with a strong community feel and a diverse population. It has good links to the A40 providing easy access to Central London, Heathrow and M25. It is home to Ealing borough's newest secondary school and encompasses Perivale and popular walking spot Horsenden Hill and Northala Fields.

Art and culture have penetrated under the skin of the community whom campaigned for 12 years to obtain a public hall for the town in 1966. The Oldfield Tavern public house in North Greenford became a popular venue for a rock group called the Detours, later formed the famous English rock band The Who in 1964.

Venture a little further and you'll find West Middlesex Golf Club, set in outstanding local parkland, and neighbouring Ealing Broadway with its popular shopping scene and nightlife.

A PLACE OF HISTORY

Greenford was an ancient parish in the historic Elthorne Hundred, county of Middlesex. The name is first recorded in 848 as Grenan forda means 'place at the green ford'.

Greenford is considered to be the birthplace of the modern organic chemical industry at William Perkin's factory in 1850s and home to the likes of Lyons Maid ice cream, Brompton bikes and Hovis bread. Local anecdote says that Queen Elizabeth I would only eat bread made from wheat grown in Greenford.

Greenford has enjoyed an excellent commercial and industrial growth since the opening of the Grand Union Canal in the 1790s and Great Western Railway in 1838, and since then it has attracted skilled and talented population to the area forming a diverse community.
